

the spotlight

above the rest

Fun- with business partner she Justine Roberts 18 months after she after the re- e- i- n- 1. Competition. Trend Vision 2008 Hair Competition.

Justine said: "We are all very proud of Tina. She has beaten more than 3,000 entries in this competition."

"We've only been open a short time and it's great to have achieved this for the salon so quickly."

a Jones, of the Orchid Hair Salon, on ge Wells, is through to the regional d competition

BLENDING IN: Phil Millington from the Satellite Shop with his Sqish

Satellite dishes in camouflage

By Lee Moran

WHEN is a satellite dish not a satellite dish? When it's a plastic box with a personalised sticker on top - otherwise known as a Sqish.

The Sqish is new to this country and the only place to stock this kind of discreet alternative to the standard satellite dish is The Satellite Shop on London Road in Southborough.

Owner Phil Millington, who has run the shop for 19 years, said: "The Sqish is a quirky contemporary alternative. It receives Sky and Freesat. A specially made sticker created from a digital photo can be put on top to camouflage it to help it blend into its surroundings."

"We were approached by a Korean company about selling it in the UK and have had lots of interest so far."

The Sqish, given its name when Mr Millington decided to shorten square dish, is also in demand by people in the Cotswolds, who say it would be ideal to hide their dishes on their thatched roof cottages.

He added: "There are a lot of posh houses around in Tunbridge Wells so hopefully it will be interesting to people here."

■ The price of Sqish ranges from £150 to £190 and the personalised sticker costs £25. It will shortly be available from a network of authorised retailers and installers. To see more, visit www.sqish.co.uk

Reading Rocks calendar of events includes a